DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1-4, 6-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Kameda 2003/0119348 5,167,516. Regarding claims 1 and 9, Kameda discloses an electrical connector for mating with a complementary connecting device having a mating portion, comprising: a shell 30 having an internal cavity and a front opening for receiving the mating portion of the complementary connecting device inserted into the cavity, a housing 20 mounted in at least a rear portion of the shell and having a mating portion extending forwardly into the cavity; and a shutter 11 slidably mounted in the internal cavity of the shell and formed with a passage for receiving the forwardly extending mating portion of the housing therethrough, whereby when the mating portion of the complementary connecting device is inserted into the cavity through the front opening in the shell, the shutter is slidably pushed rearwardly from a forward position to a rear position whereat the mating portion of the housing passes through the passage in the shutter for engaging the mating portion of the complementary connecting device.

Regarding claims 2 and 10, Kameda discloses spring means 23 for biasing the shutter toward its forward position.

Regarding claims 3 and 11, Kameda discloses said spring means comprises a coil spring extending in a direction between the housing and the front opening in the shell.

Regarding claims 4 and 12, Kameda discloses said shutter is elongated, and including a pair of said coil springs at opposite ends of the shutter.

Regarding claims 6 and 13, Kameda discloses said shutter includes a rearwardly extending post 13 projecting into a front end of the coil spring.

Regarding claim 7, Kameda discloses front-to-rear interengaging guide means 14 between the shell and the shutter.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 5, 14 and 15 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kameda in view of Yamaguchi et al. 6,942,503.

Kameda discloses the invention substantially as claimed except for the shell being metal shell having a grounding portion for connection to the printed circuit board. However, metal shells are well known in the art as evidenced by Yamaguchi et al.

Yamaguchi et al. discloses a metal shell 14. it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill to modify Kameda by providing a metal shell for grounding as taught by Yamaguchi et al. a housing mounted in at least a rear portion of the shell and having a through hole. AAPA does not disclose a shutter slidably mounted in the internal cavity of the shell for movement between a forward position substantially closing the front opening of the cavity and a rear position; and a metal spring for biasing the shutter toward its forward position, the metal spring extending through the through hole in the housing and into engagement with the metal shell.

Regarding claim 15, Kameda discloses the spring is a coil spring extending in a front-to-rear direction, with a rear end of the coil spring extending through the through hole in the housing and into engagement with a rear portion of the metal shell (as modified).
